

Mexico and China: Rivals or partners

Marisela Connelly

The China Mexico relationship is set in a historical context to understand the process by which they have been able to strengthen the political relationship, cooperate in the field of international affairs and work together to solve problems in the economic relationship. It is analyzed within the framework of China Latin America relationship; A comparative study of the cases of Brazil and Mexico is made, since the South American country has managed to establish an integral relationship with the Asian country and achieved success in different fields. A prospective study will be carried out in order to identify the points that may be placed the China Mexico relationship in a higher stage of cooperation.